Kerala University Library

The Kerala University Library, formerly the Library of the University of Travancore, was established in 1942 even though the University of Travancore was started in 1937. Till the formation of a separate library for the University, The Trivandrum Public Library and the libraries of the Arts and Science colleges served the requirements of the academic community. The administration of the Trivandrum Public Library which had around 33,356 books and 93 periodicals was brought under the University in 1938. The Arts College was amalgamated with the Science College in 1942-43 and about 10,000 books from the Arts College Library was transferred to the University College. The remaining books numbering about 20,000 mostly of an advanced nature were kept in the Arts College. This formed the nucleus of the University Library Collection. The personal libraries of Divan Bahadur Dr. S. Krishna Swami Aiyangar and Professor P.P. Sastri were purchased and added to the collection.

The library is having a plinth area of 98,823 Sq.feet started functioning in the present building on 8th September 1962. It is situated at the land where Rabindranath Tagore delivered his maiden speech in Travancore on 9th November 1922 after receiving Nobel Prize.

Mission: To foster research and development and providing learning support to the academic community.

Vision: To transform the library into a potential knowledge resource centre with advanced technology.
